Ballet of "The Mista."

Willowy in its plantic grace and simpost wiseful in the subdused coloring of its atmosphere, the first seems from "On the Love of Ethe" perhaps held more distinction than any other. The hallet of "The Mista," danced to the "La Source" hallet music of Delibes, struck the keynote of the fight. Bathed in the faint light of daybreach, the forest scene disclosed its mecturnal nymphs swaying imageorously affer the night's frolle and sinking to their cest. DEEP INTEREST SHOWN

So far, although many have confessed their mability to make headway on the justices presented in the past two days, not the slightest sign of discouragement has shown itself. In fact, all are determined to make event greater efforts to gain a "ciean state," and recognise that if the puzzles were easy for them; they would also be easy for hundreds of others, and their chances of ultimately extaing the gains would be correspondingly reduced.

BOOKLOVERS SWAP

Already the contest has proved itself to be the most popular presented to Washingtonians in recent years. As has been dweft upon often, nothing brings so many people tegether as a mutual interest in books, and a contest based on books always strikes a popular chord. Many of the contestnis are in friendly communication with each other, "feeling each other out," as the anying goes, and exchanging tips. This is one of the most interesting features of the rivalry, "fill help you out on this purals, if you'll help me on that," is the commonist agreement aftered, and frequently fill help to the contest become and are helped over the rough sport, and are helped over the rough sport, and, as the contest progresses, much of this exchange of sid will be necessary if the number of these whe have correct answers along the list is not to suffer a sharp drop.

Many inquiries come in delly regarding some of the fine points of the condition, but generally the queries are answered clearly and definitely in the printed list of conditions, and the inquirers are referred thereto.
